

PROF. RAINUKA DAGAR
Director – Research
(Gender Studies)

Rainuka Dagar is Director (Research), Gender Studies Unit, at the Institute for Development and Communication (IDC). Her work focuses on two separate research fields — Gender and Justice and Democratic Governance. In the domain of gender, her engagement is with the study of the politics of gender constructs, gender positioning in multi-cultural societies and gender in conflict dynamics with an application of culturally-sensitive methodologies. She has 25 years research experience, conducted, extensive time series studies on Gender Based Violence factoring in local cultural specificities particularly in Punjab and Haryana. These have covered a span of terrorism, economic stagnation, assertion of khaaps, caste based tensions and the momentum of women rights. In the field of public safety and citizen rights she has evolved performance measures, strategies for citizen and civil society mobilization and worked in collaboration with governments to deploy measurement tools for service delivery. Her experience includes Global Director, Police Station visitor Week, Altus Global Alliance; Visiting Professor at the School of Public Policy, Central European University and Advisor to Chairman on National Sub-Committee to Devise Pathways to Improve Conditions of Schools MHRD, GOI. Her recent publications include Mapping Criminal Justice Delivery in India (2009), which is co-authored; Gender Discourse in Elections: Constructing a Constituency? (2011) and Gender Narratives and Elections-Mandate for Safety, Development or Rights? (2015) in Sage edited volumes and Gender Identity and Violence: Female Deselection in India (2014) published by Routledge.

Rainuka Dagar, Ph.D. | Director Gender Studies | Institute for Development and Communication (IDC) Chandigarh | Tel. +91- 172-2625941 | rainukadagar@idcindia.org